영코믹스 YC-332

이른 아침, 혜영은 자신의 방에 진호가 누워 자고 있음을 보고
깜짝 놀라게 된다.
혜영은 호프집을 나선 이후의 일들이 전혀 생각나지 않아
어제밤 일에대해 진호에게 조심스럽게 물어보는데…
다행히 아무 일 없었다는 말을 들게 된다.
하지만, 얼마 후 혜영에게 엄청난 사건이
일어나게 된다!

아직도 느낌이 생생해…
선생님의 체온이!!

Translation Notes

Translation can become tricky, due either to cultural differences or simply the language itself. This section is here to help our readers better understand some of these difficult sections better.

As opposed to leaving the translation notes as sidenotes along the borders of the manga, we prefer to discuss such issues in greater depth by devoting a separate page to these points.

Pocari Pocari refers to Pocari Sweat, an extremely popular Japanese sports drink. More or less, it's the Gatorade of Asia, though I personally think it's not that great. I've heard that it tastes a lot like "Arctic Shatter" Powerade, though I can't validate this claim. "Pocari" in Japanese means "like a cloud floating in the sky."

SK Won 1000 Won is approximately worth 1USD. This means Jin-Ho gets about 857USD or 86GBP each month for his allowance. Not too shabby for a highschooler IMO ^^,

EDITOR'S RANT

Well, another development has happened to our main characters. But who could've thought it'll be like this XD. Anyway, pls enjoy the chapter as much as amaru001 (the pervert editor of KMTS, and Ambi pervert. XP

Translation Notes

Translation can become tricky, due either to cultural differences or simply the language itself. This section is here to help our readers better understand some of these difficult sections better.

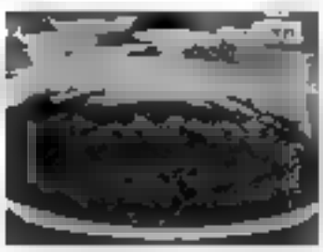
As opposed to leaving the translation notes as sidenotes along the borders of the manga, we prefer to discuss such issues in greater depth by devoting a separate page to these points.

SINCE APPARENTLY AMBI MAKES JP HIS BUBBLES
I HAVE A REQUEST! PLEASE EXPAND THE MENU AT THE STORE! THERE'S NOTHING TO EAT!! THEY SAY OTHER SCHOOLS SELL JJAJJANGMYUN AND DDUKBOKKI!!
SLURRRP
KUAH

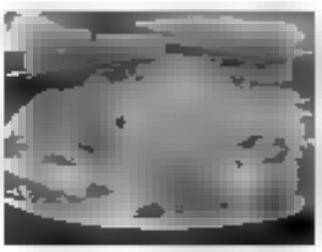
Jjajjangmyun: An extremely popular Korean dish, Jjajjangmyun basically plays the role that pizza does in American diets. In fact, the food is based on a Chinese food by the same name, and was given a fancy Chinese history, but the Korean version bears no resemblance to its inspiration other than being a noodle dish.

Ddukbokki: Another mainstay of the Korean diet, Ddukbokki is a hot plate of rice cakes in a spicy sauce made of rice powder and ground chilli pepper.

Both Jjajjangmyun and Ddukbokki are widely eaten, due to their cheap cost (A gnormous bowl of either can go for between 2.50-4USD-- apparently under 2USD if you're particularly adventurous) and blazing-fast delivery options (In the U.S. there are pizza delivery men. In Korea, there are Jjajjangmyun delivery men who can bring you your dinner in under 10 minutes). Either way, both foods are considered junk fast food options, and thus schools prefer not to offer them on the menu.



Jjajjangmyun: Noodles in black bean sauce with meat and vegetables



Ddukbokki: Rice cakes in hot pepper sauce

AMBI REBUTS!
BTW, FOLKS. THANKS FOR BEARING WITH US ON THE SLOW RELEASES. AS MANY OF YOU KNOW, I WAS TAKING A BIG NATIONAL EXAM, AND WAS MORE OR LESS A HERMIT THE LAST TWO MONTHS. I'M SURE PASA HAD HIS OWN MATTERS TOO. THINGS HAVE GOTTEN A LOT EASIER NOW, SO HOPEFULLY WE'LL SEE FASTER RELEASES AGAIN. THANK THEI33TFLEET FOR THIS CHAPTER TOO! HE'S A TRANSLATING MACHINE!
AND HAPPY B-DAY TO SPY! I KNOW I OWE HIM ONE ;)
AND LAST, BUT NOT LEAST, THE SITE'S BACK! (BUT OUTDATED) SO PLEASE START POSTING ON THE FORUMS AGAIN AND BRINGING EVERYTHING BACK!!

Translation Notes

Translation can become tricky, due either to cultural differences or simply the language itself. This section is here to help our readers better understand some of these difficult sections better.

As opposed to leaving the translation notes as sidenotes along the borders of the manga, we prefer to discuss such issues in greater depth by devoting a separate page to these points.

Unni As "Oppa" is the Korean honorific for "older brother," "Unni" is the Korean honorific used by girls to refer to an older sister. Its Japanese counterpart is "Onee," and the two words are surprisingly similar-sounding.

As this is our only translation note for this chapter, here's a review of Korean honorifics:

	Word	Meaning	Japanese Counterpart
1	Sunsengnim	Teacher	Sensei
2	Oppa	Used by girl to address older male	Onii
3	Hyung	Used by boy to address older male	Onii (In Japanese, the speaker's gender is not taken into account)
4	Unni	Used by girl to address older female	Onee
5	Noona	Used by boy to address older female	Onee
6	Sunbae	Used by underclassmen to address an upperclassman	Senpai
7	-nim	Used to address someone of much higher social status	-sama
8	-shi	A polite honorific	-san
9	-n	A familiar honorific	-chan

Translation Notes

Translation can become tricky, due either to cultural differences or simply the language itself. This section is here to help our readers better understand some of these difficult sections better.

As opposed to leaving the translation notes as sidenotes along the borders of the manga, we prefer to discuss such issues in greater depth by devoting a separate page to these points.

Myungranjyut Caviar. Pollack roe in particular. To most Americans, it may sound gross, but various fish parts are eaten all over Korea and Japan. Personally, I think it's tasty ^^

Jal Mukketsumnida Literally translated, is "I will eat well." but means something closer to "Thank you for the food." It has the exact same meaning and purpose as "Itadakimasu" in Japanese. I suppose it's just another example of a culturo-linguai homologue between the two cultures.

Student ID Numbers For the sake of simplicity and order, in Korean schools, all students are given a number (as opposed to being called by name -_-) This number, combined with their class number, is their student ID number.

Ex. Ami is Number 26 in Class 3-1. Her number would thus be 3-1 26. 3 is her grade year (yes, Korean high schools only have three years, so she's a Senior), and 1 is her class number. During attendance taking, exams, etc., the number is used instead of a name, as it's awfully convenient for teachers. Unfortunately this means that students who don't really know each other well may refer to each other by number, rather than name.

THESE DAYS, THE HIGH SCHOOLERS...

As opposed to leaving the translation notes as sidenotes along the borders of the manga, we prefer to discuss such issues in greater depth by devoting a separate page to these points.

Monami: As you can probably tell, Jin-Ho is playing word games with Ami's name. The correct spelling/pronunciation is "Un Ami," but he jokingly calls her "Monami," which is a highly popular premium stationary brand in Korea. The status of Monami is that analagous to Sanno in Japan, and Monami has its own line of mascots and characters, comparable to Hello Kitty and Keroppi. Un Ami, Monami, Tsunami. Sounds like a plan to me ^^

If you haven't notice, on the table of contents of vol. 2, ch16 is entitled "Him, bring him here" XD. Blame ambi for making Jin-ho a gay XD.

-pasaway098

Translator's Rant:

Pasa forgets that I didn't translate the table of contents– it was someone else XD. (Not to mention, Jin-Ho can be gay all he likes. I'll take the women ;P
